Nominations Open for Intelligent Health Association 2015 Awards

Judges for the 2015 Intelligent Health Association Awards come from strong academic and technology industrial backgrounds

NEW YORK, January 5, 2015 — The Intelligent Health Association (IHA) announced today that nominations are now open for the 2015 Awards. This is the third year the organization seeks to recognize the companies and individuals that have made significant contributions to patient care and healthcare facility management using wireless technologies. See <http://ihassociation.org/awards>.

The distinguished judges are: Gisele Bennet, Georgia Institute of Technology professor; Alfonso Gutierrez, University of Wisconsin distinguished researcher; Donna Hudson, University of California-San Francisco professor; and John W. Walz, consultant and retired Lucent Technologies manager.

“Seeking relief from manually introduced errors and redundant costs, pioneering healthcare providers have sought solutions in wireless-based opportunities. The Intelligent Health Association lauds these pioneers through its Awards program established in 2012,” says IHA CEO Harry Pappas. He adds: “We are pleased that judges for the 2014 awards are returning to review the nominations for the 2015 awards, and to identify and honor the outstanding healthcare institutions of 2015.”

Highly regarded in their own fields of technology and medical applications, the judges for the 2015 IHA Awards also have experience on numerous recognition committees to ensure that the Intelligent Hospital Awards will be determined fairly. Judges will choose from entries submitted by February 1, 2015. There are nine award categories:

- Improving the Patient Experience: Care and Safety
- Improving Regulatory Compliance
- Best Comprehensive Integration
- Most Innovative Use Case
- Most Innovative Use for Physical Security
- Most Innovative Use for of Business Intelligence

- Most Comprehensive Use for Protection of Property
- Best Use Case by a Critical Access Hospital
- Best Demonstration of Patient @Home Care

Award recipients will be notified on March 4, 2015 and invited to receive their awards April 13, 2014 in Chicago, Illinois at the annual Healthcare Information and Management Systems Society (HIMSS15) conference and exhibition.
